QUEEN SYLVIA IS CROWNED AT T. U.

About 65 Took Part in May Day Festivities on the Campus

"The queen is crowned! Three cheers for the uncrowned queen!" Thus went applause on the University of Tulsa campus Monday afternoon when Miss Sylvia Hall was crowned May queen for the school year drawing to a close and announcement was made that Miss Lucille Berlin is queen for the coming year by virtue of recent student voting. Miss Berlin, though "queen of the May" for 1922-23, will not receive the "crowning glory" until May day, 1923. Miss Berlin, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Berlin of this city, is a junior at the university and a graduate of Tulsa high school.

May day exercises of march, solo and group dances and pageant, with costumes, colorful and music, was had one of the largest-numbered outdoor audiences in the history of May day programs at the university. About 65 took part in the program. Their "crowning" subject, Miss Hall, the queen, and Lawrence Johnson, as Robin Hood, had a large audience.

The University of Tulsa guild, an organization of faculty wives and women members for the social and material welfare of the institution, did a flourishing business in sandwich selling with the proceeds certain to return to the university in some form. Officers of the guild are Mrs. E. S. Hill, president; Mrs. C. H. Kimbrough, vice president; Mrs. L. M. Wood, secretary, and Mrs. H. D. Chase, treasurer.

Mrs. Dan P. McCarthy and Mrs. Herman H. Hendershot have been selected to represent the Tulsa Drama club at the convention of the Federation of Women's clubs to be held at Wagoner, Okla., May 2-3-4.

HELEN HUNTER'S HUSBAND

By Jane Phelps

CHAPTER XX.
Helen Sleeps a Bit Too Long.
After Jack had departed, Helen drank another cup of coffee, took in the ice for the day, and the morning paper, then retreated to her room, leaving word that she was not to be disturbed by the telephone.
"Jack's a good boy!" she said aloud as she passed through the orderly living room. "But he's so silly!" He could easily earn more and then we could have a maid. I don't of hate to have him do housework, but if I give in now I'll never get what I want," and throwing off the kimono that covered her nightdress, she crawled back into bed, the paper her companion.
She read it through from beginning to end, understanding only a part of what she read—if you exclude the advertisements, which she understood very well indeed. Then, the paper finished, she darkened the room and slept. This was how Jack found her when at 5 o'clock he came home early after a tiresome and discouraging day.
At first he thought she was out. "Playing bridge again!" he muttered crossly. Then he noted the drawn shades and quick fear sent him into the bedroom where he found Helen cuddled in bed, fast asleep.
Jack was hungry, tired, and—he acknowledged it to himself—cross. He had interviewed several "prospects" but they had remained "prospects." He had received little encouragement that they would ever be anything more. Finally he had determined to go home early, eat his dinner and go to bed. Jack took sleep made up things may look brighter," he crumbled with a twisted smile.
As he stood and looked down at the soft curves of his sleeping wife it was not admiration that stirred him, but indignation. He had cleaned the house, made it habitable for her, had lost all of his night's sleep while she slept quietly after her guests had gone, and now, still asleep, she angered him. Without waking her he flung out of the room.
In the dining room he halted. The breakfast table was exactly as he had left it. (Sliced dishes and the smell of stale food disgusted him. For a long moment he stood looking in disgust at the table, then with a muttered curse resumed his coat and hat and without a word left the flat.
An hour passed. Helen yawned and stretched luxuriously.
"I wonder what time it is!" she muttered just as the clock in a neighboring tower commenced to strike the hour.
Lastly she began to count. When she came to 6 she sat up. At 7 she was out of bed. She drew the shades and looked out into the early night.
"I wonder where Jack is?" she said aloud as she drew on some clothes, then gazed to think she had slept so long. She felt rested, good. But how hungry she was!
Once dressed she hurried into the kitchen. She had not marketed for anything save her party, and the ice box was practically bare—not even an egg!
"I'll make Jack take me out," she said, and hurried back to her room, making a little face as she passed the disorderly dining room table. She was ready even to her hat, but not Jack came.
"Where in the world can he be?" she said impatiently as she stood in the window.
The clock struck 8.
Tears in her eyes, Helen went once more into the kitchen. Hunger demanding to be appeased, she found some rolls left from the party, a little of this and that, and sitting down at the messy table, she ate her supper, seasoned with salt, angry tears.
She was still sitting there when Jack came in.
"Where in the world have you been?" she asked flaring up at him. "Out to get my dinner." His answer conveyed nothing of anger. "Out to get your dinner! And me here—"
"Asleep!" he replied. "There are limits even to my patience, Helen." "And you went out and had dinner without me, and I was so hungry!" "Yes, and I shall do so again unless you have it ready for me to eat here with you."
"If mother only knew—how—you—treated me," she sobbed.
Tomorrow—Jack Takes the Bit in His Teeth for Once.

Good Morning Judge!

"30 Days!"

Speeding through traffic—an accident—court, a fine, jail sentence or license revoked—it's an all-too-common story these days.

Such rigid enforcement of traffic ordinances makes the Detroit Electric more emphatically than ever the ideal town car. Its speed range fits exactly with police regulations, and running smoothly at moderate speeds, it gets about expeditiously through traffic without constantly tempting to a reckless pace. Its ease of handling and braking power sharply reduce the risks of accident. Its operating cost falls far below that of a gasoline car.

Altogether, it is a safe and sane town car—and with a comfort, a restfulness you had not thought possible. Ask today for new prices and a trial ride in a Detroit Electric.

THE DRAKE is under THE BLACKSTONE management, which is the world's standard of hotel service. The two hotels are on Michigan Avenue, only a short distance apart.

Admire for State Office.
Special to The World.
OILTON, May 1.—Ell L. Admire, present representative of Creek county, editor of the Oilton Gusher, chairman of the oil and gas committee, and perhaps as well known as any man in the public party, filed his papers last week for the office of corporation commissioner with the state secretary of the election board. Mr. Admire will begin an active campaign at once for the nomination.

Mining Firm Seeks Lease on 700 Acres in Picher Field.
Special to The World.
PICHER, May 1.—Appropos to the renewal of leases upon Indian mining lands in this vicinity, now under review by the commission representing the Indian commissioner at Washington an exceptional offer has been filed with the Quapaw Indian agency by the mining firm of Fullerton, Beck & Dobson, in which they offer a bonus of $100,000 and 12 1/2 per cent royalty to the owner of the land when zinc ore sells for less than $70, and 15 per cent royalty when the price is over $70.

The land involved in this offer comprises 750 acres in the heart of the Picher field, including the allotments of Harry Crawford, Mary Whitebird, Eudora Whitebird and Joseph Whitebird, whereon 15 mills are located.

Change in Postmasters.
Special to The World.
DOUTHAT, May 1.—Ed T. Washington, who has been postmaster at Douthat for several years, tendered his resignation some time ago in order to give his entire attention to his mercantile business. The resignation was recently accepted by the postal department, and pending the appointment of his successor M. B. Fuller has been named as acting postmaster. The office is third class and pays about $1,200 a year.

Don't Scratch Teeth

Beautify them in this scientific way

Don't try to whiten teeth by use of harsh abrasive. The enamel, if you harm it, won't come back. Polishing agents should be mild, as in Pepsodent.

Combat the dingy film. Do it as millions now are doing—in this scientific way. Then the prettier teeth you see everywhere now will come to you and yours.

The cloudy film
Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays. When not combated, it forms coats which are the basis of tartar. Film absorbs stains, making the teeth look dingy. Those cloudy teeth rob millions of much beauty.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Germ's breed in it, and they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to film.

Ways to end it
Film has been the great tooth problem. Old methods did not end it. So well-brushed teeth discolored and decayed. Tooth troubles have been constantly increasing. Now dental science, after long research, has found two ways to fight film. Able authorities have proved their efficiency. Careful people the world over now see and feel the results.

A new-type tooth paste has been created, made to meet modern requirements. The name is Pepsodent. These two film combatants are embodied in it for daily application.

Five new effects
Pepsodent brings five effects which science now demands. One is to multiply the starch digestion in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits on teeth before they ferment and form acids. One is to multiply the alkalinity of the saliva. That is Nature's agent for neutralizing mouth acids—the cause of tooth decay. It leaves the teeth so highly polished that film less easily clings.

All five effects come from every application. So film, starch and acids are constantly combated. Forces are created which night and day fight enemies of teeth.

To countless homes, all the world over, this has brought a new era in teeth cleaning. The results will be life-lasting.

Send the coupon. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. The results will surprise and convince you. Cut out the coupon now.
